

How to talk to kids about internet safety

Video Transcript

Kids as young as kindergartners use the Internet every day, whether for school or just for fun.

But that opens them up to online scams, especially financial ones.

Pop ups, fake scholarships, phishing messages, they're all designed to trick them and drain your bank account.

So how can you talk to your child about Internet safety and financial scams? Start by teaching them to ask themselves these three questions.

One, why am I getting this?

Two, why does this make me feel like I have to act fast?

And three, does this seem way too good to be true?

Online safety is always changing, so keep the conversation going and stay updated on the latest scams.