Speaker 1

Meet Barry. Barry likes flexibility with his finances depending on the price of a purchase. Barry knows when to use his checking account to pay for something now. And when to use his credit card so he can pay for the purchase later. With toggle, Barry can link his checking account to his Commerce Bank credit card and choose whether to pay now or pay later based upon his purchase category preferences.

[A Commerce Bank Toggle webpage shows a Pay Now screen with columns for category, setting and amount. To the left of each row is a toggle switch.]

That way, when Barry uses his Commerce Bank credit card, toggle will pay now for any purchase below his specified purchase amount, and any purchase above his specified purchase amount will remain on his credit card for Barry to pay later, as he normally would.

[Under grocery carts of items, on the left is the text, Pay Now, Less than $125. On the right is the text, Pay Later, greater than $125.]

Speaker 1

And if Barry changes his mind and decides he doesn't want to pay now for a particular purchase, he can always use the unwind feature to move the purchase back to his credit card account to pay later.

[A cursor hand clicks the icon and a suitcase for $100 moves from Checking, pay now, to Credit, pay later.]

Speaker 1

Complete flexibility with one card.
